

Numeracy Volunteers

- please share your experiences on social media!

We'd love to hear about your experience on social media networks, it's a great way to show friends, family, and colleagues the impact you have as a Numeracy Volunteer. You're supporting our mission to inspire children to see the value of maths in the real world!

Wondering what to post?

LinkedIn particularly is a fantastic platform to increase our reach, so please do post to promote your involvement amongst your professional networks and beyond.

Here are some ideas to get started:

- How did it feel to go back to school?
- Were you initially nervous and out of your comfort zone?
- Did you enjoy it and feel a sense of achievement?
- Did the children ask some interesting questions or say anything that made you smile?
- How do you use maths every day?
- What would you tell your 10-year-old self about maths?
- Do you have a top tip for maths learners of any age?

Let everyone know that your volunteering November is part of our Number Confidence Week campaign. We're encouraging adults and children all over the UK to build their confidence with maths. #NumberConfidenceWeek.

Please spread the word and encourage people to try the National Numeracy Challenge. It's our free, online learning tool designed to help improve everyday maths skills in manageable steps, whilst building confidence along the way.

Some important notes:

If the schools take photos that can be shared publicly, we will send them to you (please remember only the schools can take photos). We will also confirm if the school is happy for you to name them in your posts. Otherwise please say 'I went back to school today in London / Nottingham / Portsmouth / Bradford / Chesterfield, or wherever you may be!'

National Numeracy

@Nat_Numeracy

National Numeracy

@National_Numeracy

Please tag us and make sure you tag your organisation too!

#volunteer

#volunteering

#csr

#corporate social responsibility

#primaryschool

#everydaymaths